

Abby Chan

Abby has had extensive dance training beginning at an early age with a focus in Ballet (based on the Royal Academy of Dance Syllabus), Tap, Jazz, Lyrical and Hip-Hop. She has also enjoyed years of training with professional teachers from Broadway Dance Center in New York City, as well as renowned performers from across the country including Los Angeles and Chicago. Abby performed competitively for 12 years at Denville Dance Arts Center, Denville, NJ.

Abby began teaching and choreographing recreational and competitive dance at Denville Dance and other local studios when she was in High School. She teaches Ballet, Lyrical, Jazz, and Tap ranging from ages 4-18. Her favorite style of dance is Tap. During her senior year of High School, Abby received a full tuition scholarship to Nancy Chippendale's Tap Summer Intensive where 400 Tap dancers from across the country are given the opportunity to take class with world Tap champions and members of national Tap teams. In addition, she has received several prestigious titles, awards and scholarships from leading dance organizations.

Abby is currently a student at Penn State University and is a part of the Master of Accounting Program. She is also a member of Urban Dance Troupe at Penn State where she is able to continue growing as a dancer. Abby is passionate about helping her students achieve their goals throughout dance and life.
